

B-SCHOOL CORNER

Team BLoC

Chinese student at IMI Kolkata attracted by "India's profound culture"

Chen Wanglongshi

MAY 20, 2016 19:08

Law student from Tsinghua University, Beijing, plans on submitting a dissertation at IMI-K

International Management Institute (IMI) Kolkata has signed a number of academic and research cooperation agreements during the past few months with eminent universities and institutes across the globe. While on its trajectory to develop and expand international ties, it has been successful in attracting various students from abroad, the institute said in a statement.

Chen Wanglongshi, a scholarship holder from the Sichuan University, China, and at present a post-graduate student at the School of Law, Tsinghua University, Beijing, arrived at IMI Kolkata in April this year to pursue courses such as Economics and Organisational Behaviour.

With an interest in ancient legal culture and economics, Chen says he plans to prepare a dissertation on the Law and Economy of Ancient Indian Village Community under the mentorship of Prof Arindam Banik, Director, IMI Kolkata and Dr Tirthankar Nag, Dean (Research and International Relations) at the institute.

On his first visit to India, Chen says, "India is a great country. I am attracted deeply by its long history, profound culture and bright development prospect."

Welcoming him, Professor Arindam Banik, stated, "Chinese students from Sichuan University have already attended higher management courses last year. This visit will further strengthen our cultural ties with China." Dr. Tirthankar Nag added, "We are delighted with IMI Kolkata emerging as a prominent centre in India to promote such cultural initiatives on a regular basis."